Using in-situ surface modification, one can achieve the desired size, shape/morphology, properties for these metal oxides. Moreover, the synthesized materials are highly stable in the photo-catalytic process and non-toxic. Hence, the combination of high photo-catalytic stability, non-toxicity and efficient up-conversion properties in the synthesized material paves the way for its applications in photo-catalysis, energy conversion and in the biological field as well as environmental degradation.

In the Panel Discussion, as the theme of the seminar focused on multidisciplinary research, Prof. S Srikantaswamy urged to start the research center in the college and advised all the faculties of the department to involve in the research activities on the present scenario. Principal Dr. N. Shankareswara said that we would bring this into the notice of the management and to begin the research center. With this suggestion all the faculties consented to be part of the research activities in the following days.

Finally, Dr.B.N.Chandrashekhar, Faculty and Convenor of the Seminar SAFG College thanked all the delegates, faculty members, participants and students on behalf of the college and management.
